Dear Dr. Henney,

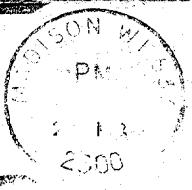

I write to you about the use of antibiotics to promote livestock growth. I understand you are considering restrictions and face stiff opposition from drug manufacturers and the livestock industry. I write to ask you to opt for safety and health. Antibiotic use for factory farms is unnecessary and dangerous. We all know that. It's just the political will of our leaders^{is} lacking. Please follow the European model and ban the use of antibiotics to fatten livestock when those drugs are used to treat humans. That's the least your agency could do. Please help.
